Gen, Harrison's Wealth,

Gen. Harrison's wealth is variously estimated, public opinion rating it as high as half a million dollars. Those best informed about the ex-President's affairs, however, say he was worth about 255,000 or 300,000. At the time he was elected President he was reputed to have accumulated $125,000 from his law practice, and this has at least been doubled since that time. Of late years his practice, owing to his great reputation as a constitutional lawyer, was very lucrative. His fee in the Venzuelan boundary dispute, in which he represented the South American republic, was $100,009.

Wanted His Son Reinstated.

Had it not been for the illness of ex-President Harrison mandami ex-President Harrison mandamus proceedings would probably be pending now to compel the administration to restore Russell Harrison to his rank in the volunteer army. Shortly before the adjournment of congress the members of the Indiana congressional delegation were informed that Gen. Harrison, who has been smarting under the treatment of his son by the administration, had determined to have recourse to the courts to remove the blot upon the military record of the family, which has been preserved for several generations untarnished. The ex-President felt that his son was summarily dropped from the army because of his (the ex-President's) public criticism of the policy of the administration in dealing with the new possessions. To preserve the record of the family and to secure what he considered justice, he proposed to have the matter tried in the courts. The members of the USE OF PIGEONS IN WAR.

Macy Messages Carled During the Stege of Ladysmith.

Maj. Altham gives an interesting account in the journal of the Royal United Service institution of the pigeons that were used as messenger; during the siege of Ladysmith. Soon after the arrival of Sir George White in Natul the Durban Homing society offered the loan of their birds to the military authorities. Two members of the society took charge of the feeding and flying of the birds. Lotts were prepared in Ladysmith and 25 trained and 69 untrained birds. They all returned asfely to Durban, and were sent hack with 33 ather partially trained birds. During the first mouth of the siege, before signaling communications were established, the pigeons were of great use. Twenty-eight birds, carrying 15 separate messages, were flown, and of these 17, carrying 11 messages, achieved safely the journey of 120 miles. Three birds arrived, having dropped or pecked off their message en route. No exact record of the time spent in the journey seems to have been kept, but in one instance a bird pitched from Ladysmith at 5:30 a.m. Teached Dirthan at 11:30 a.m. The loss of birds was extended to three causes—bad wantior, imperfect reasing and birds of pay. The pipe size good for a discussion of 5:00 miles. Some of the Ladysmith it in a bad was then record. Ladyuch lives here been recet-for a dobusts (g.) Durban, which are about that declared apart. Neat St. Peul, Minn, In a Comstery of Fretride Corpess.

For some time past, according to a dispatch from the New York Journal, the strange work has been going an near St. Peul, Minn, of digging up petrified bodies. A whole graveyard full of them has been found at Ely, an old cemetry near this city.

When the first petrified bodies were found it was thought that some petroliarly elective embalming full had been used on the bodies. But as the work progressed, in moving the bodies been used on the bodies. But as the work progressed, in moving the bodies from the abandoned burying ground it was found that nearly all the bodies were in a more or less advanced state of petrifaction.

The first graves opened were those of Henry Polkinghorn and Adam Penglase, who did enearly ten years ago.

The easkets were in an excellent state of the person of men engaged in the work, it was found that the bodies had turned to found that the bodies had turned to stone. The flesh tints still remained, and the clothing, until exposed to the air, when it erumbled to pieces, looked as bright and flesh as it did on the day of the funeral. So heavy were the bodies that it took the com-bined strength of five men to remove them.

Up to the present time only about 20 bodies have been transferred from the old cemetery to the new, and of this number half have been found to befully petrified, the remainder having become practically dust.

The case is a peculiar one, owing to the fact that alongside of a petrified body will be found the remnant of a body that has returned to its original dust, showing that the petrifying properties of the soil exist only in spots.

Why Liveryman Would Not Let His Last Rig Go Out.

"You can believe this if you wish, but it's true, just the same," said a drummer to a Milwaukee Sentinel rep-resentative. "I struck a little town just north of the city a few days ago jos norm of the city a rew agas go and wanted to hire a rig to go out into the country. There was just one livery stable in the place, and I entered into negotiations with the proprietor, but he said he couldn't accommodate me. That stumped me. There I was, stranded in a village with just the toget through with There I was, stranded in a village with just time to get through with my business between trains if could obtain a horse. The old man who kept the stable was sympathetic enough, but he stuck to it that there was nothing to be done. It was pretty cold and we were doing our tilking outside the barn, so I sid the door open and walked in. There stood a top buggy and a respectable-looking horse was enting its oats in its stall.

"What's the matter with giving me that?' I asked.

"Naw, can't let said the way is and the owner."

"But why?' I persisted. 'Doesn't it belong to you?'

"But why? I persisted. 'Doesn't it belong to you?'
"Yep,' came the answer.
"Yep,' came the answer.
"Is the beast sick? I asked next.
"Naw. Ibut it's like this. I can't let the last rig in my stable go out. If I do what am I going to do when some one close comes along?"
"And say, what do you think," the man who was telling the story went on. "He said that so impressively that I actually took the train back it town and let my business go. As he put it there seemed something sound about his reasoning."

Injured by Licking Frost

Injured by Licking Freat.

A farmer living in eastern Pennsylvania narrowly escaped being killed recently in attempting to lick the frost from the rails of the Philadelphia & Reading Iracks. According to newspaper reports his tongue stuck fast and held him a prisoner until he heard a freight train approaching, when he managed to pull loose just in time to escape being struck. His tongue was baddy lacerated and the wound is considered serious.—Railway and Enricering Review.

American Books in Mexico

Mexico buys more American be Mexico buys more American books than does France, and nearly as many as Germany. Much of the trade is due to the large resident American population to be found in Mexican cities and to the demand from mining camps where Americans are living, and not a little is due to the growing spread of English among the Mexican people.

A BANKER FOR THIEVES

Londoner Who Derives Bis Wealth from the Crooks of the Town.

Leedoner Who Derives Bis Wealth from the Crooks of the Town.

"That rann has struck quite an original line," said a detective the other day, undeating a respectable-looking man in a London East end street, not arise to Answers. "He's a 'thievos' banker." Not that thieves are a thritty lot, but there are ways in which the 'banker' is useful.

"Just after a burglary, when the detectives are paying surprise visits and searching suspected persons' duelings, it would mean eertain conviction if they found, say, £30 or £40 stowed away in the threves lodgings, so any gold they've stolen is intrusted to the banker for a few days. Sometimes a burglar, starting of a fresh 'erib-cracking' expedition, will leave any gold he possesses with the banker, in case he gets 'larged,' or lest he be robbed by a brother thie.

In another case a bank thief intrusted (230 to him, previously to undergoing 15) years' penal, and as he charges a small fee, gives no interest, and is said to fee, gives no more, and a fee fee, have un's cid the or may at ten pet cent, for the whole time, he must have done well. Why don't we stop him? Well, he is too arful. He keeps no miny at his house, and doesn't revers stolen goods, and we can't prove anything. We caught an imitator of his, though."

DREAD THE X-RAY.

Some interesting experiments the effect of the Roentgen rays the effect of the Roenigen rays on the lower animals have recently been made. A box was made half of wood and half of sheet lead. In the wooden half a number of larvae of fites, bees, beetles and other insects was placed and the box was then put in the field of the X rays.

of the X rays.

The insect colony at once became greatly excited, and after crawling to and fro, finally enigrated, to a worm to the leaden half of the box, where the rays could not penetrate.

The experiment was repeated, say the New York Journal, many times.

A similar experiment was trice with the blind larvae of a certain beetle. A number of them was place in an open eigar box, which also een tained a metal box with an opening unice a metal lock with an opening. No sooner were the rays turned on than the insects showed signs of distress. Their uncasiness increased, and in a little while they all sought refuge in the metal box. The X rays, it should be remembered, easily penetrate wood and most other substances, but cannot meet the work and the little.

As the larvae in the second experiment were entirely sightless, their perception of the rays must take place through the nerves of the skin. This assumption is in accordance with the frequently observed fact that prolonged exposure to the X rays give rise, even in human beings, to inflammation of the skin and causethe hair to full off.

The sales of tobacco on the local market this week amounted to more than 100 hogsheads and prices of last week were fully sustained. The character of the weed offered consisted of low leaf and lugs and rejections were small. Receipts were fairly good but the rejections were small.

Receipts were fairly good but the rain did not produce a first class season for handling the weed, as the damp weather was followed by high winds drying out the tohaccovery rapidly.
While much of the erop of 1900 has been sold a very small per cent has been delivered to the purchasers and the prizing in the barns has also been light. A real good "season" lasting several weeks would have the effect of moving a large portion of the crop, as farmers are anxious to rid their barns of stock on hand, and receipts would correspondingly increase.
When the bulk of the crop moves there will be some fine leaf to go on the market and higher figures than have been quoted for the commoner
